“What's My Brain Got To Do with My Relationships?”

This is an interactive class to learn how biology, culture, family and acts of spirit can make or break your relationships. It will help anyone who wants to have closer, happier and more authentic relationships in their life. Learn about yourself and others so life can be an experience and an expression of joy.

Topics covered: personal motivation styles, how the brain reacts to stress, conversations vs. confrontations, differences between how men and women perceive their world and communicate it to each other, society pressures, authentic communication and much more.

The speaker for this workshop will be Gina Green. She has been a certified “BodyTalk” practitioner for 10 years, certified “Harmonium” practitioner and a public speaker on relationships, ineffective thinking patterns and brain function. She has 22 years of teaching and presentation experience in her background.

There is no fee for this workshop. However, we will be taking up a good- will offering.

Remember to bring a pot luck dish to share. Water, lemonade & coffee will be served.
